STORIES

Discovering the Role of PPPs in Water

Water is essential to all. However, there exist large groups of citizens suffering in abject poverty that have been denied access to this critical resource due to an infrastructural gap. This arises when governments lack the sufficient funds required to provide basic services much needed by their citizens. Hence, there is scope for public-private partnerships to play an integral role in remedying this gap.

Getting ready for successful PPPs

As PPP projects require a high level of expertise from all parties involved, many countries in the ECE region are interested in the training classes that will prepare policy makers for the challenges of PPPs. IP3 with support of the UNECE International PPP Centre of Excellence will hold a PPP master class in Geneva during the month of August and a repeat session in September. This knowledge-sharing process will encompass several key topics, including the concept of PPPs and risk mitigation strategies.
