Panel C:        Towards a balance care strategy

Rapporteur:

Mr. George Pavia
Assistant Director
Ministry of Health, Elderly and Community Care
MALTA.

Statement by Rapporteur

The key points raised by the keynote speaker and the panellists concerned mainly the demographic changes and the great challenges which these are presenting us. These demographic changes are a result of:

- (i) improvement in health care services,
- (ii) better standards of living,
- (iii) more health awareness, and
- (iv) longer life expectancy.

Today's main challenge is that of providing a balanced care strategy to make good for the ever increasing ageing population.

Common measures which are actually being adopted by most European and North American countries as pointed out by the panellists are:

- adopting and developing care services in order to address elderly needs;
- helping the elderly poor, the elderly frail and lonely;
- the provision of formal and informal care;
- seeking possible forms of care, that is choosing between institutional care and community care or a combination of both;
- assessment of effective care;
- dealing with quality standards and quality assurance in the delivering of care;
- various method of financing;
- rights/obligations and protection of both care users (ie.elderly) and care providers;
- provision of long term care;
- the deployment of social workers to specifically deal with elderly matters;
- regular monitoring and evaluation of care services; and
- day care centres and social clubs.

The main problems/challenges raised by the speakers included:

- financing, integration and sustainability of long term care;
- the issue of finding and recruiting the right persons to work in the caring field as well as their training and retraining;
- how to assure standards of care and provide good quality care;
- how to provide dignified care as well as protective care for the elderly;
- how to promote independence and active ageing within their own homes and their communities ;
- how to keep up the social and well being of the elderly;
- how to take care of the elderly persons with special needs such as the disabled, mentally ill and those with dementia;
- the issue of lack of coordination between different care providers that is the government, the private sector, the family and civil society; and
- how to deal with elderly abuse.

Initiatives and suggestions brought up by the keynote speaker and panellists towards a balanced care strategy were:

- more intercollaboration between all care providers, that is government, the private sector, the family, social society and other stakeholders;
- intercollaboration between various government departments such as Health, Social Security, Family Affairs, Education and Housing, and other government agencies was emphasised;
- adoption of healthy lifestyles through health promotion campaigns;
- intergenerational collaboration and family solidarity;
- finding an equilibrium in the reconciliation of individual and social needs and responsibilities more particularly with respect to intergenerational solidarity, aid and care;
- community living incentives through flexible options and choices for high risk individuals;
- subsidisation of elderly services by the government;
- consumer empowerment through, for example, a one step-shop where an elderly person can choose services for his/her needs;
- integration of health and social care services;
- systematic support to non-professional care providers;
- compulsory social insurance for long term care;
- drafting and implementation of social and economic legislation in order to help the elderly to continue living in their own community;
- further research in the elderly field;
- ethical issues in the provision of care for the elderly;
- use of modern technology including IT both by care providers as well as by the elderly;
- the use of benchmarking on a national as well as on an international level;

- rights and obligations of senior citizens as for instance the right to be treated with human dignity and the right to decide for his/her own life by himself/herself without any interference.

During this Panel (c) the questions and points raised from the floor included:

- the issue of migrants, that is:
Are we adequately prepared to deal with elderly persons coming from a different cultural background?
- architecture in elderly homes, that is:
Are we structuring our elderly homes appropriately to suite our elderly needs or otherwise?
- what is being done to help the most disadvantaged elderly persons namely the mentally ill and those suffering from dementia?
