Geneva, 1 and 2 July 2013

Report of the UNECE Regional Conference on ICPD beyond 2014 “Enabling Choices: Population Priorities for the 21st Century”

I. Introduction

1. In 2010, the General Assembly (GA) of the United Nations reaffirmed the goals of the Programme of Action (PoA) of the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) and initiated a thorough review of the implementation of the PoA 20 years after its adoption. GA resolution 65/234 established a roadmap for achieving the vision of the ICPD PoA beyond 2014 (ICPD Beyond 2014) and requested the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), in cooperation with the regional commissions and other agencies, to lead the review process. The ICPD Beyond 2014 review in the UNECE region was coordinated by UNECE Population Unit and UNFPA Eastern Europe and Central Asia Regional Office (EECARO).
2. The review of the implementation of ICPD PoA in the UNECE region concluded with the UNECE Regional Conference on ICPD beyond 2014, entitled “Enabling Choices: Population Priorities for the 21st Century”. The Conference took place at the Palais des Nations in Geneva, Switzerland from 1 to 2 July 2013. The conference was organized jointly by UNECE and UNFPA and hosted by the Government of Switzerland.
3. National official delegations from 43 UNECE member States participated in the Conference. The following member States were present: Albania, Andorra, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyz Republic, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Serbia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Turkey, Turkmenistan, United Kingdom, Ukraine, United States of America and Uzbekistan.
4. The Conference was also attended by representatives from the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and the World Health Organization (WHO).

5. Representatives of various civil society organizations, including a youth delegation and experts from academic institutions also participated in the conference.
6. In total, 307 participants attended the Conference. The full list of participants is available at the conference website¹.

A. High-level plenary session

7. Mr. Andrey Vasilyev, Deputy Executive Secretary of UNECE and Ms. Anne-Birgitte Albrechtsen, Deputy Executive Director of UNFPA opened the Conference and welcomed the participants.
8. The Conference elected Mr. Urs Schmid, Ambassador Deputy Permanent Representative of Switzerland to the United Nations Office and other international organizations in Geneva and representative of the host country of the Conference as the Chair of the Conference. The Conference elected Mr. Alexey Vovchenko, Deputy Minister of the Ministry of Labour and Social Protection of the Russian Federation as the Vice-chair of the Conference. The Chair and the Vice-chair were elected for both days of the Conference. Professor John Hobcraft from the York University, United Kingdom, was designated as the Rapporteur of the Conference. The Conference participants adopted the agenda (ECE/AC.27/2013/1).
9. Former President of Finland, H.E. Tarja Halonen, delivered a keynote address on the topic 'Sexual and reproductive health and rights as just – and smart – politics'. It was followed by the youth representatives' addresses to the Conference on youth vision and development priorities in the region. The three youth representatives were: Mr. Ahmad Alhendawi, Secretary-General's Envoy on Youth, Mr. Jakub Skrzypczyk from Youth Coalition in Poland and Ms. Grace Wilentz from YouAct in Ireland.
10. It was reported that in the framework of the ICPD Beyond 2014 review process, a Global Survey was conducted in the UNECE countries to assess the progress made towards achieving the ICPD PoA implementation in the region. In total 45 UNECE member States submitted their Global Survey questionnaires. Based on the results of the Global Survey and country implementation profiles, a regional report 'ICPD Beyond 2014: The UNECE Region's Perspective' was prepared. Mr. Werner Haug, Director of UNFPA EECARO together with Ms. Vitalija Gaucaite Wittich, Chief of the Population Unit of UNECE presented the findings from the report by highlighting the persistent and emerging issues with regard to population and development in the UNECE region (UNECE Regional Report on 'ICPD beyond 2014' Survey Results: Executive summary – ECE/AC.27/2013/3).
11. The Executive Coordinator of the ICPD Beyond 2014 Secretariat of UNFPA, Mr. Kwabena Osei-Danquah, introduced the overall findings from the Global Survey conducted within the five regional commissions.
12. National delegates from Sweden, Finland, Romania and Belarus informed the Conference about the achievements in implementing the PoA in their countries and reaffirmed their support for the ICPD Beyond 2014 process. A representative of the European Parliamentary Forum on Population and Development reminded the Conference about the Vienna Human Rights Conference in 1993 and its linkages with the ICPD.

B. Thematic sessions

13. In addition to the high-level opening and closing plenary sessions, the Conference discussions were organized in three thematic sessions:

- Population Dynamics and Sustainable Development;
- Families, Sexual and Reproductive Health Over the Life Course;
- Inequalities, Social Inclusion and Rights.

14. The first thematic session on ‘Population Dynamics and Sustainable Development’ discussed the changes in population structure and size and its effects on sustainable development in the UNECE region. Increasing longevity and population ageing was noted as one of the main trends in the region. The promotion of active and healthy ageing policies is, therefore, crucial in facing the changing population dynamics in the region. Speakers² highlighted the importance of investing in education and health and discussed the positive effects of such investment on social, economic and environmental development. Investment in human capital was noted as essential throughout the life course of individuals. It was emphasized that policies are needed to invest in the education of girls and women, which is the key driver of population stabilization, bringing families out of poverty and economic growth. Moreover, the need for policies to ensure day care for children and elderly and to facilitate men’s equal contribution to household work and care was underlined. Such policies also increase choices, enable work-life balances and allow people to have children. The various effects of population ageing, urbanization and international migration were discussed by the participants, emphasizing the need for a rights-based and gender responsive approach to development. The keynote speaker pointed out the correlation between changing population dynamics and climate change.

15. The session was followed by statements and comments from Turkey, Germany, the Russian Federation, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and the Republic of Moldova. Representatives from the following civil society organizations made interventions during this session: International Federation of Medical Students’ Associations (IFMSA), Danish Family Planning Association, Deutsche Stiftung Weltbevoelkerung, Asian Forum of Parliamentarians on Population and Development and WWHR – New Ways Women for Women’s Human Rights.

16. The second session on ‘Families, Sexual and Reproductive Health Over the Life Course’ highlighted the changing family forms in the UNECE region. It was noted that the provision of socioeconomic support to the family rests with national governments in ensuring adequate financial assistance, work-family reconciliation policies, education and care for children, and legal rights. Gender inequality in families persists where child-rearing and domestic work is mainly a woman’s responsibility.

17. During the second thematic session, participants stressed the importance of applying a human rights-based, gender-responsive and life course approach to sexual and reproductive health and rights. Ensuring access to quality sexual and reproductive health services was highlighted, especially for youth and adolescents who need support in order to receive more information on and access to youth-friendly sexual and reproductive health services. Empowerment of women and girls was emphasized highlighting the need to allow women and girls to make informed choices about their own sexual and reproductive health. Speakers stressed the increased need for comprehensive sexuality education. More attention is needed for the prevention, treatment and care of HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted infections.

18. Interventions from national delegates were delivered by Uzbekistan, the Netherlands, Germany, Georgia, Belgium and France. Countries shared their good practice examples regarding sexual and reproductive health and rights. Statements were also made by the World Health Organization's Regional Office for Europe and the civil society organizations ASTRA Youth, CHOICE for Youth and Sexuality, Federation for Women and Family Planning and International Federation for Family Development.

19. The third thematic session on 'Inequalities, Social Inclusion and Rights' addressed the issue of vulnerable population groups, gender equality and the empowerment of women. It was noted that the inequalities between and within countries have increased in recent years. Gender equality was highlighted as crucial in advancing the social development in the region. Vulnerable groups, such as youth, older persons, people with disabilities, migrants, sex workers, orphaned children and ethnic minorities require special attention in advancing the ICDP PoA beyond 2014. Some population groups, such as women and young people from ethnic minorities, are subject to multiple vulnerabilities. Challenges also remain in tackling gender-based violence and discrimination against women and girls.

20. Government and national parliament delegates from Armenia, Sweden, Poland, Austria and Azerbaijan, representatives of the civil society organizations Kyrgyz Indigo, Rutgers WPF, Sexual Rights Initiative, International Planned Parenthood Federation European Network, Turkish Family Health and Planning Foundation and a representative from the Institute for Demography and Social Studies of Ukraine made interventions during the third thematic session. At the end of the session, the delegate of the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia made a statement clarifying that the law on abortion in their country is not aimed at restricting abortion, but at helping women and limiting illegal abortion.

C. Panel discussion 'Partnership and International Cooperation'

21. The panel on Partnerships and International Cooperation – organized during the lunch break on the second day of the Conference - was a dynamic discussion focused on expanding partnerships and increasing investment for the implementation of ICPD PoA beyond 2014. Panellists shared good practices with respect to national and international investment in the ICPD agenda and highlighted the importance of allocating adequate resources at all levels. They also recognized the need to reaffirm the goal of 0.7 per cent of GDP for Official Development Assistance.

22. Panellists noted the importance of partnerships for promoting the ICPD agenda beyond 2014, and particularly the strong role played by civil society and young people in advancing the ICPD PoA. Strengthening partnerships among local, national and international civil society organizations was stressed as key to ensuring accountability and achieving the ICPD PoA and the Millennium Development Goals.

23. Finally, panellists highlighted the synergies between ICPD Beyond 2014 with the Post-2015 development process and the need to ensure that issues of population dynamics and sexual and reproductive health and rights are strongly reflected in the Post-2015 development framework.

D. Closing plenary session of the Conference

24. The Chair of the Conference, Ambassador Urs Schmid, presented the main elements of the Chair's summary. He highlighted that the human rights of individuals should be at the centre of the development processes. Additionally, actions that ensure equality before the law, advance gender equality and address the sources of inequities, especially inequalities in access to education, health services and employment as well as actions that ensure that attention is given to vulnerable groups and families should play a central role. The Chair emphasized the need to promote and protect sexual and reproductive health and rights, to enhance the capacities of adolescents and youth, and to support families in facilitating the challenges of achieving work-life balance. A human rights-based and non-discriminatory approach should be applied to all individuals, irrespective of their sex, age, ethnicity, marital status, disability, sexual orientation, and gender identity or immigration status. The Chair also stressed the need for reliable data, including data on vulnerable groups. More attention is needed to protecting the rights of migrants, especially the victims of human trafficking, and to ensuring governance that is based on accountability, participation, transparency and the rule of law.

25. The draft version of the Chair's summary was distributed to the Conference participants for comments during the lunch break of the second day. The final version of the Chair's summary was made available before the closing plenary session of the Conference. It is reproduced in the Annex I of this report.

26. The representative from Malta objected to the inclusion of rights and services related to abortion in the Chair's summary. Malta considers the termination of pregnancy through induced abortion as illegal.

27. A youth representative expressed gratitude for including access to sexual and reproductive health services in the Chair's summary, especially the provision of legal abortion services for young women and adolescents.

28. In the closing remarks, Mr. Andrey Vasilyev, Deputy Executive Secretary of UNECE and Mr. Werner Haug, Director of the Regional Office for Eastern Europe and Central Asia of UNFPA highlighted the importance of partnerships between various stakeholders in advancing the implementation of the ICPD PoA beyond 2014.

Annex I

Chair's Summary

Introduction

1. The high-level regional conference “Enabling Choices: Population Priorities for the 21st Century”, held on 1-2 July 2013 in Geneva, Switzerland, was organized jointly by the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) and the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (UNECE), and hosted by the Government of Switzerland.
2. The conference marked the culmination for the UNECE region³ of a process aimed at reviewing the implementation of the Programme of Action (PoA) adopted by the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD), held in 1994 in Cairo, Egypt. Its objective was to assess the progress made in implementing the ICPD PoA in the region, highlight lessons learned and successful approaches, and make recommendations on the further implementation of the ICPD PoA in the UNECE region beyond 2014.
3. The review process in the region included the ICPD Beyond 2014 Global Survey, as well as a regional report based on the Survey results and a study of population trends and policies in the region. It also included three thematic consultations corresponding to the three thematic sessions of the regional conference, as well as consultations with civil society, young people and parliamentarians.
4. The UNECE Regional Report summarizes information on legislation, policies, programmes and strategies adopted and implemented by UNECE Member States in relation to the ICPD PoA. Overall, the report confirmed the PoA's continuing relevance for achieving inclusive social and economic development, prosperous societies and environmental sustainability, based on gender equality and the respect for human rights. It indicates that significant progress has been made in policy development and programming.
5. The analysis shows that societies can prosper under conditions of slow or no population growth and ageing if they adapt their institutions and equitably invest in people's education, health and employment opportunities independently of gender, age and origin. Still, the region faces many barriers and challenges in developing people's full potential. These include unacceptably high differences in mortality and morbidity between countries and between groups within countries, an incomplete agenda of gender equality and women's economic empowerment, political leadership and participation in decision-making, large inequalities in access to sexual and reproductive health information and services, discrimination and social exclusion of migrants, minorities and other disadvantaged groups, and increasing inequalities in access to employment and income opportunities which affect particularly young people.
6. The conference was chaired by Ambassador Urs Schmid of Switzerland and consisted of five sessions. The opening plenary session included a keynote speech by Ms. Tarja Halonen, Former President of Finland, followed by an intervention by young people on their vision and priorities for the region, and by the presentation and discussion of the UNECE Regional Report on the outcome of the ICPD Beyond 2014 Global Survey in the region. Three thematic sessions were dedicated to the following topics: Population Dynamics and Sustainable Development; Families and Sexual and Reproductive Health over the Life Course; and Inequalities, Social Inclusion and Rights. Each thematic session commenced with a keynote presentation and two discussant interventions, and proceeded with statements by delegations and discussions on the respective topics. Young people presented the Call to Action adopted by the Regional Youth Forum held in Istanbul in May 2013. A panel session on Partnership and International Cooperation for advancing the ICPD agenda beyond 2014 also took place during the conference.

7. Participants included representatives of governmental authorities, including high-level officials, academia, civil society organizations and youth, as well as members of national parliaments. Experts representing relevant UN agencies and other international and regional intergovernmental organizations also participated. In total, over 300 participants from 43 UNECE Member States and one area attended the conference.

8. At the closing session of the conference, Ambassador Urs Schmid, Chair of the Conference, presented this Summary, which was prepared in consultation with the conference participants.

Progress and Recommendations

9. Participants welcomed the findings and conclusions of the review of the implementation of the Programme of Action of ICPD and its follow up beyond 2014, and reaffirmed their commitment to the ICPD agenda. They emphasized that people should be at the center of development, with particular attention to human rights, gender equality, health and education, especially the education of girls.

Population Dynamics and Sustainable Development

10. Participants noted that in the UNECE region, people are living longer, healthier lives, and have higher levels of education than past generations. This has been accompanied by lower fertility, population ageing, and more complex migration patterns, with resultant policy implications, all set against a backdrop of economic crisis. Participants underscored the need for better integration of population dynamics into development planning at the national and sub-national levels in order to comprehensively respond to demographic change and its implications. Participants also underlined the necessity to take a long-term, holistic, rights-based approach to population dynamics and its interlinkages with sustainable development.

11. It was stressed that policies in both low and high fertility countries should be based on the right of individuals to decide freely and responsibly on the number and spacing of their children and to have the information and means to do so, taking into account the need for such policies to be based on evidence and best practices. Participants emphasized a recommendation for policymakers to develop a holistic approach and family-friendly, gender sensitive and responsive policies, across all relevant sectors – including health, education, employment and migration. Policies need to support all forms of families, and address in particular vulnerable families. They should also enable women and men to find a balance between family and work responsibilities, e.g. with flexible, affordable care options for children and older persons. Assumptions about low fertility were questioned by participants, as below-replacement-level fertility is not a threat if accompanied by adequate investments in health, education and employment opportunities. Participants also highlighted the evidence that in the European context gender equality contributes to higher levels of fertility and to women's labour force participation. Moreover, participants emphasized that many countries with slow or no population growth are very prosperous.

12. One of the major successes identified by the participants was that in many countries of the UNECE region people live longer and healthier lives. The reasons for this success include improvements in public health and better access to health services, including sexual and reproductive health services, progress in medicine, as well as the adoption of healthier lifestyles. At the same time, persisting differences in life expectancy and adverse trends in mortality, especially among working-age men, in some countries in Eastern Europe and Central Asia were pointed out as an area of concern. Participants recommended that particular attention is paid to addressing excess mortality among men in these countries.

13. Participants recommended that governments invest in building human capital throughout the life course of individuals, particularly in building the capacities of adolescents and young people and developing their full potential, and allow them meaningful participation in all stages of the formulation, implementation and evaluation of policies and programmes, such as those related to job-creation and employment.

14. Participants emphasized the right to quality education at all levels in a safe and participatory environment, and to decent work for young people through effective policies and programmes that generate employment, which is secure and non-discriminatory, and provides a decent wage and opportunities for career development. Participants were of the opinion that this is essential for social cohesion and for ensuring social, economic and human development, as well as returns from the demographic dividend in the less developed countries of the region where this is relevant.

15. Participants recommended the promotion of healthy lifestyles among adolescents and young people, with access to youth-friendly health services and social security coverage, in order to improve the lives of the future generations of older persons. To better respond to ageing societies, participants recommended that effective policies and programmes be adopted aiming at providing appropriate health and social services. The conference participants believe that prevention of discrimination, securing the health care, income and social networks of older persons will allow societies to benefit from their productivity and contribution as caregivers, volunteers and entrepreneurs, and reap the longevity dividend of current and future generations of older persons. Participants recommended that support be given to communities and families to ensure that older persons receive the long-term care they need, and to promote independent, active and healthy ageing at the place of residence.

16. Participants noted that population ageing in the UNECE region has implications for intergenerational equity, and called for policies and measures taking into account that in most countries relatively small generations of young people will shoulder higher per capita support for older generations.

17. Participants noted that in many countries migration of young people from rural to urban areas is having a substantial impact on both rural and urban communities. They recommended that governments formulate innovative policies and measures that are responsive to the evolving nature of these communities and create dynamic relations between rural and urban areas.

18. Participants recommended that greater attention be given to protecting and fulfilling the human rights of migrants, almost half of which are women and girls that are particularly vulnerable, including victims of human trafficking and those forced to leave their homes due to humanitarian crises. Participants also called for promoting policies that foster the integration and reintegration of migrants. They called for ensuring regional and international portability of acquired benefits from work abroad and migration. Participants were in agreement that migration can be of benefit for both origin and destination countries, noting, however, the different impact that migration has for countries of origin and destination.

19. Participants noted the impact of climate change and that the UNECE region has the highest levels globally of consumption and CO₂ emissions which has implications for the whole world. They called for further emphasis on innovations aimed at energy efficiency and in progressive adaptation policies related to climate change.

Families, Sexual and Reproductive Health over the Life Course

20. Participants emphasized that freedom, and the ability and right to make informed choices and decisions, empower individuals to fulfil their potential and participate fully in economies and societies. They underscored that the promotion and protection of sexual and reproductive health and rights are essential to achieving gender equality, social justice and sustainable development.

21. Participants called upon governments to take a human rights-based approach to sexual and reproductive health, including support for sexual and reproductive health services that protect women's and girls' general health and well-being, allow for well-informed decisions, and are respectful of individual choices. Participants stressed the need for national legislation and policies to be free of any form of discrimination, coercion and violence, including intimate partner violence. Governments, in partnership with parliamentary networks and CSOs, should take effective steps to combat practices violating the reproductive rights of women and adolescent girls, such as spousal or parental consent requirements to receive health services, forced sterilization and forced abortion, or discrimination in education and employment due to pregnancy and motherhood. Participants also called for the removal of all barriers preventing women and girls from access to safe abortion services, and for protecting the rights of people living with HIV to access sexual and reproductive health services and education.

22. Participants recognized that gender sensitive and life-skills based comprehensive sexuality education, in a manner consistent with evolving capacity, is essential for adolescents and young people to be able to protect themselves from unintended pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections (STIs), including HIV and AIDS, to promote values of tolerance, mutual respect and non-violence in relationships, and to plan their lives. They called for the design and implementation of programmes, in particular youth-friendly programmes, that provide accurate information about human sexuality, including growth and development, sexual anatomy and physiology; reproduction, contraception; pregnancy and childbirth, STIs, including HIV and AIDS; family life and inter-personal relationships; culture and sexuality, human rights empowerment; non-discrimination, equality and gender roles, sexual behavior, sexual abuse, gender-based violence, harmful practices; as well as, opportunities to explore values, attitudes and norms concerning sexual and social relationships, deal positively and responsively with their sexuality, promote the acquisition of skills and encourage young people to assume responsibility for their own behavior and to respect the rights of others; taking into account scientific data and evidence.

23. Participants recommended that professional groups such as health care providers, members of the judiciary, teachers, social workers, and law enforcement personnel be provided with training to enhance their understanding of human rights-based, gender-sensitive and responsive, non-discriminatory approaches to all individuals, regardless of age, sex, race, ethnicity, class, religious affiliation, marital status, occupation, disability, HIV status, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, immigration status, or language.

24. Participants reaffirmed the critical role policy makers, parliamentarians, community leaders, and media have in fostering an enabling environment for the full and equal enjoyment of human rights, including sexual and reproductive health and rights.

25. Participants particularly stressed the recommendation to improve access to information, counselling, supplies and services that increase the ability of all couples and individuals to make free and informed decisions about the number and spacing of children.

They emphasized that highest priority needs to be given to preventing unintended pregnancies by, inter alia, removing all barriers to access to contraceptives, including restrictions based on age or marital status or the prohibition of certain contraceptive methods. The need to supplement affordable contraception with free contraception for marginalized groups was emphasized. Emergency contraception and counselling services need to be made available in a timely and non-judgmental manner to all women and adolescent girls. Participants further recommended that sexual and reproductive health services that offer a high quality of care be made widely available to all young people according to their needs. Availability includes both affordability and convenience, which generally implies a range of comprehensive and integrated services. Another recommendation made by participants was to have sexual and reproductive health services for women and men integrated within a system that offers both primary health care and referrals for more specialized needs. The need to strengthen health systems in some countries of the region was also stressed by participants.

26. Participants observed that STIs, including HIV and AIDS, continue to be a major concern in the UNECE region. Their prevention and treatment need to be an important part of health system responses. Investment in STI prevention will reduce a leading cause of health problems for women of reproductive age, including secondary infertility the prevalence of which is increasing in the region. Participants recommended that all governments assume full ownership over the long term of their response to STIs, including HIV and AIDS, rather than relying on donor funding. Also recommended by the participants is more funding for prevention and treatment of STIs, including but not limited to HIV. Funding and attention are especially needed in Eastern Europe and Central Asia.

27. Participants called for eliminating preventable maternal mortality and morbidity by ensuring that all women have access to quality prenatal care and that all births are attended by skilled health personnel. Access to emergency obstetric care and management of complications arising from unsafe abortions, including revising restrictions within existing abortion laws, should be integrated into policies and practices to safeguard the lives of women and adolescent girls. Participants further called for establishing mechanisms that foster providers' compliance with human rights and ethical and professional standards.

28. Participants emphasized the need for comprehensive sexuality education training to be fully integrated into undergraduate and in-service training of teachers, school psychologists and social workers. Participants also recommended assisting parents through special programmes to increase their awareness of the benefits of comprehensive sexuality education for their children.

29. Participants recognized the sexual and reproductive health needs of migrants and recommended that affordable access to sexual and reproductive health services be made available to them in their own language and in places that are accessible to them. The governments of countries of origin and destination should act jointly in a coordinated manner to address migrants' needs and rights.

30. Participants noted that laws and practices that criminalize consensual adult sexual behaviors and relationships, including outside of marriage and including those of voluntary sex work, potentially marginalize the status of individuals in society, while constituting a public health threat.

31. In view of the fact that population ageing is a salient feature of demographic development in the region, participants called for ensuring effective policies and programmes related to sexual and reproductive health services that better respond to the needs of an ageing population.

32. Participants underscored the need for governments and societies in general to ensure zero tolerance for gender-based violence and call for measures to criminalize violence against women and girls, provide all victims/survivors of gender-based violence with access to critical services, including 24-hour hotlines, and psychosocial and mental health support. Treatment of injuries, post-rape care, including emergency contraception, post-exposure prophylaxis for HIV prevention and access to safe abortion services in cases of violence, rape and incest should be provided in a timely manner.

33. Increasing access of men and boys to sexual and reproductive health information, counseling and services is recommended by the participants. Participants also called on countries across the region to give more priority to engaging men and boys in promoting participation and equal sharing of responsibilities, such as care work, including through support programmes that target men and boys and sensitize them to gender equality and rights issues. Participants also recommended that priority be given to awareness raising campaigns and to the introduction of programmes aimed at ending sex selection in the countries affected.

34. Participants noted the diversity in the forms of the family in the region and called for appropriate public policy responses, responsive legal frameworks, and support, including financial support, facilitating work-life reconciliation providing quality early childhood education, and quality care for both children and older persons. They also noted the need to address harmful gender norms, such as ideas what are appropriate roles for boys and men, girls and women. Transforming gender norms is vital for the success of family policies. A life-course approach is needed as individuals move in and out of families and partnerships, and as they experience various family transitions. This life-course approach is also essential to ensure the protection of family members, including children, rendered vulnerable due to family circumstances.

Inequalities, Social Inclusion and Rights

35. Participants underscored that the realization of human potential and innovation depends upon guaranteed rights of personhood, bodily integrity, and protection from violence; the right to health, education, housing, livelihoods; and the benefits of scientific development. They noted that many groups, in particular women, girls and minorities, continue to suffer from multiple and overlapping forms of disempowerment and discrimination. Participants called for policies to advance gender equality, enable equal participation and social inclusion of all individuals through cross-sectoral strategies including protection against violence and abuse; preventing sex selection; creating employment opportunities for women, youth, older persons, persons with disabilities and other marginalized groups; raising awareness about their rights and facilitate their access to social services; and preventing discrimination, stigmatization and other forms of social exclusion.

36. Participants called for equality before the law and non-discrimination for all persons in the exercise of their social, cultural, economic, civil and political rights. They emphasized the need to promulgate or enforce laws that punish any kind of discrimination, violence or hate crimes and take active steps to protect people in the region from discrimination, stigma, and violence.

37. Participants emphasized that the UNECE region is seen as a leader in the progress towards gender equality, and pointed out to the successes in ensuring equal access to education, employment and political participation. At the same time persistent gender inequalities and harmful practices were pointed out by participants as an area of concern. Participants emphasized that the achievement of gender equality, women's rights and women's empowerment can make a significant contribution to poverty-reduction, inclusive growth, democratic governance, and peace and justice.

38. Participants called for the enactment and effective implementation of laws that allow education in an environment free from discrimination, violence, mobbing and bullying. They also called for inclusive education with gender-sensitive curricula in formal education systems, complemented or reinforced by programmes, peer education or sexual and reproductive health related interventions delivered by NGOs and other civil society groups and supported through government funding. Governments, CSOs and communities were called upon by participants to work together to ensure a scaling-up of effective sexual and reproductive health services for marginalized groups. Increased educational levels were also recommended by participants as an important tool in fighting unemployment and poverty.

39. Participants noted that despite the considerable progress made in the region, challenges from multiple and overlapping forms of inequality, disempowerment and discrimination still needed to be addressed. They called for measures to ensure non-discrimination in the exercise of the social, cultural, economic, civil and political rights of all individuals and to guarantee equality before the law, including the right to gainful employment, residence and access to services.

40. Participants highlighted the role of responsive governance based on accountability, participation, transparency and rule of law to address inequalities and achieve social inclusion and rights. They called on governments and other stakeholders to continue to strengthen partnerships with CSOs and NGOs, provide adequate and sustainable funding, and support the work of CSOs in eliminating social exclusion.

Partnership and International Cooperation

41. Participants expressed the view that with the deepening of globalization, issues of population and development have become increasingly intertwined with global economic, social and environmental concerns. This requires a multi-stakeholder and international approach, including national governments, United Nations, donors, civil society and youth organisations, religious leaders and private sector, to promote international cooperation efforts, including the development of joint programmes and initiatives, strengthening of policy dialogue and coordination, transfer of knowledge and technology, and allocation and mobilization of financial and technical resources.

42. While recognizing the role of civil society organizations as an advocate and service provider, an expert and a watch dog for sexual and reproductive health and rights, participants called for strengthened partnerships among local, national and international civil society organizations in the design, implementation, coordination, monitoring and evaluation of population and development programmes and policies, and encouraged the promotion of activities directed at increasing the participation and strengthening the capacity of these organizations. The participants recognised the need for increased funding to civil society organisations so that they can continue to play their multiple roles effectively on the ground.

43. Participants also called for strengthening partnerships with the private sector in the design, implementation, coordination, monitoring and evaluation of population and development programmes and policies, in particular in the areas of service delivery and commodity production and distribution.

44. Advancing the ICPD agenda is only possible through strengthened international solidarity and through strong collaboration between countries. Countries should prioritize these challenges by emphasizing good governance, by making domestic resources available, by involving civil society actors, and by addressing legislative and cultural barriers that impede access to sexual and reproductive health services.

45. Participants emphasized the need for the institutions in the region, including UNECE and UNFPA, to strengthen and ensure adequate human and financial resources to support the implementation of the recommendations of the review of the ICPD beyond 2014 in the region. They also called for a respect of the commitment of 0.7% of GDP for the Official Development Assistance (ODA).

Cross-cutting Issues

46. Participants recommended that more attention is paid to generating, collecting and using quality, timely and disaggregated census, survey and vital registration data for the purposes of research and analysis, as well as of planning, monitoring and evaluation of policies and programmes. They also recommended employing comparable methodologies across studies and sectors, within countries and the region. These measures are particularly important in Eastern Europe and Central Asia, where better data are also needed on migration, human trafficking, early marriage, gender-based violence, sex selection, teenage pregnancy, the situation of older persons, and persons with disabilities.

47. Participants called for strengthening of policies and legislations that are evidence-based by utilizing qualitative and quantitative data, disaggregated by age, sex and social vulnerability criteria. Participants noted that a gap still exist between legislation, policies and their implementation. They called for youth involvement in the design of programmes and policies, and in their monitoring and evaluation. Special emphasis was placed on the need to ensure adequate funding, involvement of stakeholders and beneficiaries, and accountability systems for follow-up. Participants also recommended the establishment of a regional platform to exchange lessons learned and good practices, and to promote effective interventions for scaling up. In general, the region has a rich experience and capacities in implementing the ICPD agenda, yet in some countries and in some areas capacity is lacking. Participants recommended that more attention is given to strengthening capacity by promoting "south-south" exchanges within the region.

48. Recognizing the returns of investing in the implementation of the ICPD PoA, participants recommended that governments at all levels, as well as communities strive to increase budget allocations and to ensure their effective utilization.

49. Participants recommended the creation of a mechanism for continuous follow-up of the ICPD PoA implementation, including in the context of the post-2015 development agenda.

Conclusion

50. The conference outcomes, together with the UNECE Regional Report on ICPD Beyond 2014, will constitute an agenda for the region's implementation of the ICPD PoA beyond 2014 and to the global review process. Given the centrality of sexual and reproductive health in the development agenda, participants called for the integration of the results of the ICPD Beyond 2014 review into the post-2015 development agenda. This Summary will, through the good offices of the Government of Switzerland, as host and chair of the Conference, be forwarded to the Secretary-General of the United Nations for consideration and possible further action. A formal report and proceedings of the meeting will be prepared and issued by the organizers of the conference.
