This document contains information on international organizations, agencies, institutions and federations that provide assistance and support for trade in various forms. The Trade Directory presented in Document TRADE/2002/4 contains two sections: the first on international organizations supporting trade and the second on the national organizations supporting trade in each UNECE member State. The contents of this document represent the draft version of the first part of the directory.

The list presented here includes contact addresses and a short description of each organization’s major activities. These descriptions were, in most cases, obtained from information made publicly available by the organizations in question. The list is structured according to the outline of areas covered that is found in document TRADE/2002/4 and uses the same section numbering.

The present list has been issued to delegations for information and comments. It is by no means exhaustive and will be further developed based upon input received.

The International Trade Centre (ITC)

ITC is a technical cooperation organization whose mission is to support developing and transition economies, and particularly their business sectors, in their efforts to realize their full potential for developing exports and improving import operations with the ultimate goal of achieving sustainable development. ITC deals specifically with the operational aspects of trade promotion and export development. For ITC, businesses, particularly small and medium-sized enterprises that are striving to achieve and maintain a competitive edge in the global market need to be backed by efficient and strong national trade support institutions. This is vital for their sustained and improved access to trade-related services such as financing, help in maintaining quality standards, advice on export packaging and ready information on the legal requirements of international business.

ITC’s six core services are: product and market development; development of trade support services; trade information; human resource development; international purchasing and supply management; and needs assessment and programme design. Its range of services, expertise and modes of delivery are continuously reviewed and adapted to the changing needs of its clients.

The World Association of Investment Promotion Agencies (WAIPA) was established in 1995 and is registered as a non-governmental organization (NGO) in Geneva, Switzerland. The Association currently has 129 member agencies from all over the world. WAIPA acts as a forum for investment promotion agencies (IPAs) to provide networking opportunities and facilitate the exchange of best practices in investment promotion. Membership is open to all agencies whose prime function is to promote any country or territory for investment. WAIPA aims to improve cooperation amongst IPAs on a regional and global basis and facilitate the exchange of experiences in attracting FDI. The objectives of WAIPA, as reflected in its statutes, are to:

- Promote and develop understanding and cooperation amongst IPAs;
- Strengthen information gathering systems and information exchange amongst IPAs;
- Share country and regional experiences in attracting investment;
- Help IPAs gain access to technical assistance and training through WAIPA sponsored events or by way of referrals to relevant international or multilateral agencies;
- Assist IPAs in advising their respective governments on the formulation of appropriate investment promotion policies and strategies.

Established in 1995 as part of the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency’s (MIGA’s) mandate to enhance foreign direct investment (FDI) in developing regions, the Investment Promotion Network (IPAnet) is the leading international investment-specific portal website providing free access to online foreign investment and privatization resources. IPAnet provides an extensive searchable database of over 10,000 web-based documents which include research on economies and product markets, investment-related laws and treaties, as well as specific investment opportunities. These resources, catalogued by country, sector and topic, are obtained primarily from the World Bank Group, investment promotion agencies and privatization agencies. The IPAnet business directories comprise contact information for over 30,000 organizations and individuals involved in foreign investment. The online service also provides links to a large number of other diverse sources of investment highlights and particulars, including links to its subsidiary websites - PrivatizationLink and PrivatizationLink-Russia.

Other organizations and agencies dealing with support to small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) can be found on IPAnet’s site.

Website: http://www.smeinstitute.com/

The mission of the Institute for SME Finance (established in July 2000) is to increase the availability and successful use of risk capital finance for SMEs in developing and transition economies. The Institute serves as a global association for stakeholders in SME finance, fund managers, investors, and other private and public institutions. Moreover, the Institute seeks to stimulate and organize new thinking and research related to the development of SME sectors through innovative investment practices.

The Institute is a global association for practitioners and investors in SME finance. Its founding partners are the Multilateral Investment bank of the Inter-American Development Bank, the International Finance Corporation of the World Bank, the US Agency for International Development, Johns Hopkins School for Advanced International studies, and FUNDES international.

Within the context of equity investment and other forms of SME finance, the Institute works principally with fund managers, investors, and entrepreneurs to:

- identify and disseminate best investment practices,
- provide training and networking opportunities for fund managers and investors,
- define and refine standards of practice and performance.

Website: http://www.icsb.org/
ICSB serves as an umbrella organization that integrates the activities of diverse organizations and professionals who deal directly with small business. It creates and distributes new information on small business management and entrepreneurial development. Ideas drawn from government, education, and commerce are provided to the small business community through the efforts of Council members. ICSB actively stimulates research in new areas of inquiry through conferences, education/teaching exchanges, small business consulting/advising and global networking. Since the Council reinforces rather than duplicates the work of other organizations, it seeks to expand the information-exchange network by encouraging development of national and associate affiliates.

Empretec helps entrepreneurs worldwide to start, grow and internationalize their business ventures. Over 10,000 entrepreneurs from Africa and Latin America have so far benefited through 24 market-driven local Business Support Centres in 12 countries. The programme has been endorsed by hundreds of private sector associations, financial institutions, and subsidiaries of transnational corporations, many of which actively participate in the management and implementation of its activities. Each country project has developed a strong and dynamic national association of entrepreneurs, supported by a coalition of bankers, established local business people and representatives of foreign companies. The programme has evolved to a stage where there are cross-border alliances between entrepreneurs in each of the two regions and an emerging process of interregional networking.

Since Empretec's inception in 1988, the programme has evolved in response to changing demands. UNCTAD has capitalized on the range of expertise and capacities relating to SME development in its own house and in ILO, ITC and UNIDO. Building on the lessons learned from implementing Empretec over eight years, and on the experience of these organizations, UNCTAD has developed Empretec further by integrating into a single programme all the activities needed by SMEs to succeed in increasingly liberalized and eco-conscious markets.

At the United Nations Millennium Summit, world leaders pledged to cut poverty in half by 2015. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) is charged with helping to achieve this and other key development goals. Its strategy focuses on:
• Democratic Governance
• Poverty Reduction
• Crisis Prevention and Recovery
• Energy and Environment
• Information and Communication Technology
• HIV/AIDS

A trusted source of knowledge-based advice and an advocate of a more inclusive global economy, UNDP provides funds; helps developing countries attract and use aid effectively; and promotes South-South cooperation. It seeks to address the many causes of poverty and to promote development, including through the protection of human rights and the empowerment of women. UNDP delivers most of its services through its 132 country offices but it also engages in global and regional advocacy and analysis to increase knowledge, share best practices, build partnerships, mobilize resources, and promote enabling frameworks including international targets for reducing poverty. In addition, UNDP supports technical cooperation among developing countries.

The Permanent Court of Arbitration (PCA) is situated at the juncture between public and private international law to meet the rapidly evolving dispute resolution needs of the international community. Under its own modern rules of procedure, which are based upon the highly regarded and widely used the Arbitration Rules of the United Nations Conference on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL), the PCA administers arbitration, conciliation and fact-finding in disputes involving various combinations of states, private parties and intergovernmental organizations. Not only do states more frequently seek recourse to the PCA, but international commercial arbitration can also be conducted under PCA auspices.

The International Air Transport Association (IATA) is the trade association of the world's international airline industry. Originally founded in 1919, it now groups together nearly 280 airlines, including the world's largest. These airlines fly over 95 per cent of all international scheduled air traffic. In a fast-changing airline world, where privatization, alliances and increased competition are global realities, airlines still need to cooperate in order to offer a seamless product of the highest possible standard to the world's air passengers and cargo shippers. Much of that cooperation is expressed through IATA, whose mission is to "represent and serve the airline industry".

IMMTA is a non-profit technical and specialized organization dedicated to furthering the concept of multimodal transport throughout the world. The objectives of the International Multimodal Transport Association are:

- to act as a catalyst for the exchange of ideas and information on modern trade and multimodal transport technologies and logistics, including implications for the environment and development, and to arrange meetings thereon;
- to act as a pool of experts on multimodal transport issues.

In pursuing such goals, the International Multimodal Transport Association's activities includes research, training seminars, conferences, the conferring of awards as well as the publication of papers, articles and books.
Since 1947 the ICAO is a specialized agency of the United Nations and linked to the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC). The aims and objectives of ICAO are to develop the principles and techniques of international air navigation and to foster the planning and development of international air transport so as to: (a) ensure the safe and orderly growth of international civil aviation throughout the world; (b) encourage the arts of aircraft design and operation for peaceful purposes; (c) encourage the development of airways, airports, and air navigation facilities for international civil aviation; (d) meet the needs of the peoples of the world for safe, regular, efficient and economical air transport; (e) prevent economic waste caused by unreasonable competition; (f) ensure that the rights of Contracting States are fully respected and that every Contracting State has a fair opportunity to operate international airlines; (g) avoid discrimination between Contracting States; (h) promote safety of flight in international air navigation; (i) promote generally the development of all aspects of international civil aeronautics.

The International Road Transport Union (IRU), through its national associations, represents the entire road transport industry worldwide. It speaks for the operators of coaches, taxis and trucks, from large transport fleets to driver-owners. In all international bodies that make decisions affecting road transport, the IRU acts as the industry's advocate. By working for the highest professional standards, the IRU improves the safety record and environmental performance of road transport and ensures the mobility of people and goods. Among its practical services to the industry, the IRU is international guarantor of the TIR carnet system under which trucks are sealed by Customs upon departure and can cross several borders without further checks until they reach their destinations.
The IRU:

- takes the initiative in making sure that vehicles are safe, clean, efficient, and economical in fuel consumption;
- encourages sound fleet management, strict vehicle maintenance and good working conditions for drivers;
- helps to make roads safer and less congested;
- seeks improvements in the environmental performance of vehicles;
- maintains close working relationships with the competent national, inter-governmental and non-governmental organisations;
- works for harmonisation and simplification of procedures affecting road transport;
- alerts the industry to changes in national and international legislation;
- strives to lift the barriers to international transport and trade.

The International Road Federation is a non-governmental, not-for-profit organization with public and private sector members in some 70 countries. It was established in 1948 following World War II by business and industry leaders who recognized the need for an international organization to focus on the growing economic and social importance of good road networks and to help rehabilitate Europe’s road systems damaged in the war. Over the years IRF has been the driving force behind major road infrastructure developments around the world including the Pan-American Highway and the huge national road building programme in Mexico in the 1950s. Today the International Road Federation continues to provide the lead in international road transportation infrastructure development through its two programme centres in Washington, D.C. and Geneva, Switzerland.
In 1948 an international conference in Geneva adopted a convention formally establishing the International Maritime Organization (IMO) (the original name was the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization, or IMCO, but the name was changed in 1982 to IMO). The IMO Convention entered into force in 1958 and the new Organization met for the first time the following year. The purposes of the Organization, as summarized by Article 1(a) of the Convention, are "to provide machinery for cooperation among Governments in the field of governmental regulation and practices relating to technical matters of all kinds affecting shipping engaged in international trade; to encourage and facilitate the general adoption of the highest practicable standards in matters concerning maritime safety, efficiency of navigation and prevention and control of marine pollution from ships". The Organization is also empowered to deal with administrative and legal matters related to these purposes. It has achieved considerable success in achieving its aim of "safer shipping and cleaner oceans". Ship casualty rates have declined and the amount of oil entering the sea from ships has been cut. The challenge facing IMO and its 161 Member States is how to maintain this success at a time when shipping is changing more rapidly than ever before.

The Committee of European Securities Regulators (CESR) was established by the European Commission Decision of June 2001. This decision was taken in the light of the recommendation of the Report of the Committee of Wise Men on the Regulation of European Securities Markets (Lamfalussy Report), as endorsed by the European Council (Stockholm Resolution, 23 March 2001) and the European Parliament (Resolution, 5 February 2002). CESR is an independent Committee regrouping senior representatives from national public authorities competent in the field of securities (Members Directory).

The tasks of the Committee is to:

- Improve coordination among European Securities Regulators;
- Act as an advisory group to assist the European Commission, in particular in its preparation of draft implementing measures to support the legislative framework for the regulation of Europe’s securities markets;
- Work to ensure more consistent and timely day-to-day implementation of the European legislative framework in the Member States;

In doing so, CESR advises the European Commission on securities policy issues relating to Europe’s securities markets and responds to mandates given by the European Commission. To foster common and uniform implementation of EU securities law, CESR may issue guidelines, recommendations and standards.

The Bank for International Settlements (BIS) is an international organisation which fosters international monetary and financial cooperation and serves as a bank for central banks. The BIS fulfils this mandate by acting as:

- a forum to promote discussion and facilitate decision-making processes among central banks and within the international financial community;
- a centre for economic and monetary research;
- a prime counterparty for central banks in their financial transactions;
- agent or trustee in connection with international financial operations.

The European Committee for Banking Standards (ECBS) was formed in December 1992 by Europe’s three credit sector associations, the Banking Federation of the European Union, the European Association of Co-operative Banks, and the European Savings Banks Group (collectively known as the European Credit Sector Associations (ECSAs)). The ECSAs represent the interests of the European banks from the countries of the European Union (EU) and the European Free Trade Association (EFTA). Poland and Hungary have observer status. Other observers include the European Central Bank, the major payment schemes (Europay International and Visa International), SWIFT, and the Euro Banking Association (EBA). Mondex International participates in the work related to plastic cards and other devices. The primary aim of ECBS is to enhance the European technical banking infrastructure by developing standards when a clear business and commercial interest has been identified. ECBS also produces technical reports and standard implementation guidelines that further assist the European banking sector’s application of relevant standards.
It is the body for creating awareness of the European banking sector’s opinion on matters relevant to the various standards and industry bodies.

Established in 1994, the International Association of Insurance Supervisors (IAIS) represents the insurance supervisory authorities of some 100 jurisdictions. It was formed to:

- Promote cooperation among insurance regulators
- Set international standards for insurance supervision
- Provide training to members
- Coordinate work with regulators in the other financial sectors and international financial institutions.

The IAIS issues global insurance principles, standards and guidance papers, provides training and support on issues related to insurance supervision, and organises meetings and seminars for insurance supervisors. The IAIS works closely with other financial sector standard setting bodies and international organisations working to promote financial stability. It holds an Annual Conference where supervisors, industry representatives and other professionals discuss developments in the insurance sector and topics affecting insurance regulation.

CEA’s policy is based on furthering private initiative and free competition. Its aims are:

- to represent the common interests of European insurers by promoting, defending and illustrating their views in international bodies;
- to promote qualified opinions in public or private, European and international organizations with an insurance or reinsurance involvement;
- to encourage cooperation between member national associations by supporting, at their request, a national cause when compatible with its position.

Via its member national associations, CEA’s objectives are:

- to exchange information and experience between markets by undertaking studies in the interests of European insurance and reinsurance companies;
- to improve the service to insured parties and to develop insurance in Europe in response to company needs;
- to advance the views of European insurers in economic and social debates where they have a legitimate interest.
4f. International Competition

International Competition Network (ICN)
e-mail: contact@internationalcompetitionnetwork.org
Website: www.internationalcompetitionnetwork.org

The International Competition Network (ICN) provides antitrust agencies from developed and developing countries with a more focused network for addressing practical antitrust enforcement and policy issues of common concern. It facilitates procedural and substantive convergence in antitrust enforcement through a results-oriented agenda and informal, project driven organization. ICN helps bring international antitrust enforcement into the 21st century. By enhancing convergence and cooperation, ICN promotes more efficient, effective antitrust enforcement worldwide. Consistency in enforcement policy and elimination of unnecessary or duplicative procedural burdens stands to benefit consumers and businesses around the globe. Members are national or multinational competition agencies entrusted with the enforcement of antitrust laws.

The World Federation of Exchanges, formerly FIBV - International Federation of Stock Exchanges, is the trade organization for regulated securities and derivative markets, settlement institutions and related clearing houses, and their diverse services to capital markets. The Federation is a private international organization comprised of the operators of the world’s leading markets, which are committed to the highest levels of market quality. It provides a forum for communication, analysis and debate among members. Its purpose is to facilitate the representation and development of organized and regulated markets, and to meet the needs of evolving capital markets in the best interest of their users. The World Federation of Exchanges is a central reference point for the securities industry, and for exchanges themselves. It offers member guidance in their business strategies, and in the improvement and harmonization of their management practices. The Federation also works with public authorities, and helps promote the informed use of markets.

Mailing address:
MIGA
1818 H Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20433
USA
Website: http://www.miga.org/

The Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (MIGA) was created in 1988 as a member of the World Bank Group to promote foreign direct investment into emerging economies to improve people's lives and reduce poverty. MIGA fulfills this mandate and contributes to development by offering political risk insurance (guarantees) to investors and lenders, and by helping developing countries attract and retain private investment.

Projects supported by MIGA have widespread benefits: local jobs are created, tax revenue is generated, skills and technological know-how are transferred. Local communities often receive significant secondary benefits through improved infrastructure, including roads, electricity, hospitals, schools, and clean water. Foreign direct investment supported by MIGA also encourages similar local investments and spurs the growth of local businesses that supply related goods and services. As a result, developing countries have a greater chance to break the cycle of poverty.

Website: www.berneunion.org.uk

The Berne Union was established in 1934. At present, it has 51 members from 42 countries and locations. The Union works for international acceptance of sound principles of export credit insurance and foreign investment insurance. It also provides a vital forum for the exchange of information, experience, and expertise between members. The Berne Union has extensive international contacts and speaks for its members both with international financial institutions and with individual buying countries. The Union and its members play a role of central importance in world trade, both as regards exports and foreign direct investments. Without the active involvement of Berne Union members, it would often not be possible to organise the financing and credits required for projects on any scale, especially in developing countries.
5d. Other International Financing Organizations

European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD)

The European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) was established in 1991 when central and eastern Europe and the ex-Soviet countries needed support to nurture a new private sector in a democratic environment. Today, the EBRD uses the tools of investment to help build market economies and democracies in 27 countries from central Europe to central Asia. The EBRD is the largest single investor in the region and mobilises large foreign direct investment beyond its own financing. It is owned by 60 countries and two intergovernmental institutions. But despite its public sector shareholders, it invests mainly in private enterprises, usually together with commercial partners. It provides project financing for banks, industries and businesses, both new ventures and investments in existing companies. It also works with publicly owned companies, to support privatisation, restructuring State-owned firms and improvement of municipal services. The Bank uses its close relationship with Governments in the region to promote policies that will bolster the business environment.

The International Chamber of Commerce (ICC) is the world business organization, the only representative body that speaks with authority on behalf of enterprises from all sectors in every part of the world. ICC promotes an open international trade and investment system and the market economy. Its conviction that trade is a powerful force for peace and prosperity dates from the organization's origins early in the last century. Because its member companies and associations are themselves engaged in international business, ICC has unrivalled authority in making rules that govern the conduct of business across borders. Although these rules are voluntary, they are observed in countless thousands of transactions every day and have become part of the fabric of international trade. ICC also provides essential services, foremost among them the International Court of Arbitration, the world's leading arbitral institution.

The World Chambers Federation (WCF) is ICC's specialized division for its chamber of commerce members worldwide. WCF was previously known as the International Bureau of Chambers of Commerce (IBCC). Through its extensive global support network, WCF enables chambers from all over the world to exchange experiences and improve their performance in areas such as finance, management and the development and promotion of services. WCF enlists the expertise of long-established chambers to advise newcomers on possible service benefits for their members and creating the best structure for maximum effectiveness. WCF also works closely with multilateral aid organizations, such as like the World Bank Group and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), on capacity building projects. The purpose of this UN-business cooperation is to assist chambers from developing countries in developing sustainable business services, thus consolidating their role in the economic development of their countries. More than ever before, chambers of commerce must work closely together to help their members take advantage of new market opportunities worldwide. WCF not only helps individual chambers to become more productive, but also strengthens links between them.

World Chambers Network

Website: www.worldchambers.com

The World Chamber Network has a global network of chambers of commerce and helps companies of all sizes expand their national and worldwide markets through secured, electronic commerce. The World Chamber Network is:

- Network of Chambers of Commerce worldwide
- Electronic online business services
- Global trading opportunities
The World Trade Centers Association (WTCA) was established in 1970 to facilitate international trade by bringing together exporters, importers and service providers. WTCA is a not-for-profit, non-political association that fosters the WTC concept and develops inter-WTC cooperative programmes. WTCA membership includes more than 300 WTCs in about 100 countries. Over 750,000 companies are affiliated with WTCA members worldwide. More than a building or an organization, a World Trade Centre (WTC) brings together business and government agencies involved in international trade, provides essential trade services and stimulates the economy of the region it serves. A WTC puts all the services associated with global commerce under one roof.
